

ABSTRACT

Provided herein are compositions and methods for the multiplex analysis and/or detection of polynucleotides having one or more distinguishable target sequences. The methods employ signal-quencher probe pairs having specific relative differential thermal melting temperatures that permit the detection of one or more target sequences on one or more polynucleotides.